Jointly Organized by
City University of Macau (China) and
Joaquim Chissano University (Mozambique)

Call for Papers (Update 3)

People's Republic of China and the African Portuguese-speaking Countries: Republic of Guinea Bissau, Republic of Mozambique and Democratic Republic of São Tomé and Príncipe - From sporadic bilateral exchanges to a comprehensive multilateral platform of mutual development cooperation.

Background:

The African Portuguese-speaking Countries, namely Angola, Cabo Verde¹, Guinea Bissau, Mozambique and São Tomé and Príncipe (STP), have been overlooked in development studies research literature. Bearing in mind their common historical background and the same official language - Portuguese, we envisage to development a better understanding of their realities. Therefore, this symposium looks at characteristics, challenges and opportunities in their development process.

The Third International Annual Symposium will be focused on the three lowest HDI scores in 2019² (excepting Angola) São Tomé and Príncipe (137), Guinea Bissau (178), and Mozambique (180). The symposium will gather scholars from these countries to debate development key issues, having MSAR as a comprehensive multilateral platform of mutual development cooperation, especially in the context of the Belt and Road Initiative and the Greater Bay Area. The main output of the symposium will be the publication of a third book, as result of conference proceedings, for a collection of eight books that will be devoted to assessing the relationship between the Portuguese-speaking countries and China.

This international symposium provides an opportunity for all those interested in African Portuguese-speaking countries to discuss their research and to exchange ideas. Researchers are invited to submit both empirical and theoretical papers that are broadly consistent with the general topic. Case studies are particularly encouraged. Since City University of Macau has already organized a symposium dedicated to Timor-Leste in the last quarter of 2018 and to the Portuguese-speaking Small Island Developing States (PSIDS) in the last quarter of 2019, priority in the selection of the papers will be given to those focusing on Guinea Bissau, Mozambique and São Tomé and Príncipe.

The international symposium is open to all involved in these research areas, including both young and experienced researchers, post-doctoral researchers, Ph.D. students, and professionals from business, government and nongovernmental institutions. Papers from all the following fields, in their broad meaning, may be submitted:

- Social, political and economic development processes since their independence;
- Their international relations, regional relevance and integration;
- Their political systems and economic structures;
- Their social achievements;
- Their geopolitics and geo-economics;
